Lenten Sermon Series: Hope Between the Shadows

When are you the most hopeful? When everything is going along great or when things are tough and you're not sure what is going to happen next? The Bible is full of insights that help us see that sometimes the shadow moments in life, times that appear to be almost too much to handle, are the very places where God's hope and grace are most fully revealed. In this sermon series we will linger in the shadows long enough to discover that the Spirit of God is already there. Dr. Glen Miles preaching.

Mar. 16 – Don't Stop Believin', Psalm 121

Mar. 23 – Passionate Patience, Romans 5: 1-11

Mar. 30 – Unfailing Kindness, Psalm 23

Apr. 6 – Rev. Carla Aday preaching

Slightly Flawed, Purchase As Is

by Dr. R. Glen Miles

Julie and I love to shop the outlet stores at the Legends Mall in Kansas City, KS. You can find some great deals but many of the clothes you buy come with a little tag on the inside that reads:

Slightly Flawed Purchase As Is.

What is true in those discount stores is also true of you and me: we are all slightly flawed. We come “As Is.”

Maybe we should put a label on the inside of wedding gowns and tuxedos that reads “the wearer of this outfit is slightly flawed. You are marrying them today AS IS.”

Now, of course, every bride I have ever seen was beautiful, every groom handsome. But we come to each other in every relationship imperfect and flawed.

However, we can’t live without the other. Frederick Buechner said, “You can survive on your own. You can grow strong on your own. You can prevail on your own but you cannot become human on your own.” We need the other in order to be human.

To choose to love is to choose to live in the messy world of relationships. To choose to be in any relationship – marriage, neighbor, friend, parent-child, whatever it might be – is a risk. The decision to love is one that invites us to take a risk, to take a chance on suffering from a broken heart. This is not an easy choice but in the long run do we have any other option?

If you give your heart away it may be broken, wounded. But as the poet Antonio Porchia said, “To wound the heart is to create it.”

That may not sound like an easy road to walk but the ancient psalmist reminds us that God “heals the brokenhearted...”

When the world is broken and falling apart God moves into our lives and creates something new. God moves into the empty space in our souls and there in that formless void begins something new and marvelous. That, after all, is the story of creation. God isn’t waiting for you to get everything together. God is ready to move to the broken and empty places in your spirit and begin a new creation.

Grace and peace to you,

We’ll also explore what makes this church special, and what you think is important for our church’s future. Please join us on Sun., Apr. 27 at 12:15

What Is the Message?

By Lara Schopp, Director of Communications

Try not to be a jerk.

This statement was my favorite of all of those turned in during the recent Gospel in Seven words sermon series. Lots of you penned thoughtful and heartfelt words and phrases illustrating your version of the gospel in just seven words. Many of you used words like “Jesus,” “faith,” “grace,” and “forgiveness.”

We took all of the hundreds of words you turned in and put them into a word cloud generator. A word cloud is a visual depiction of a set of words that gives greater prominence to words that appear more frequently in the source text. I hope you had an opportunity to see the poster in the rotunda featuring the word cloud from all of your words.

I was struck by the five words that were the largest in our graphic, meaning that they were the most repeated words among all those you submitted. Those words were “God,” “love,” “all,” “is,” and “and.”

What I love about these five words is the way you can use them interchangeably.

God is love.

God and all.

Love is God.

Love is all.

The really cool thing about this whole project is it tells us a little bit about who we are as a church and what our message is. Over the next year we, as a church, are going to dive into this concept a little deeper, taking a thoughtful look at what messages we want to give the community about who we are, and how our mission, vision and identity can share the story of Country Club Christian Church with the rest of the world. (See page 3 for more information.)

What do you want our neighbors near and far to know about Country Club Christian Church? I want the world to know that this church believes that God is love; that all means all; and that all you need is love. As I try to live my life based on these words, I’m also going to remind myself of the good advice from our church-wide exercise, and every day, try not to be a jerk.

Peace to you on your journey,

Why This Church?

by Matt Moeder

Why This Church? is a periodic guest column submitted by members of our congregation who are sharing why they chose Country Club Christian Church as their faith community.

Matt and Valerie Moeder

Over the years, several people have told me that God directs you to the church where you belong. After attending Country Club Christian Church for nearly three years, I am positive those people were right. In the spring of 2011, my longtime girlfriend (and now my wife), Valerie, and I were searching for a church to reignite our faith as we started our life together. Country Club Christian Church was the first church on our list. As we approached on that first Sunday, I did not know exactly what to expect.

I was a bit intimidated by the grandiose structure and thought the service would resemble the many Catholic masses that I experienced in my younger years when I belonged to that faith. But it was not. It was a service that was rich in tradition yet exuded warmth, inclusiveness, and provided a practical connection to God and his teachings. Our first Sunday service was indicative of everything that Country Club Christian Church has stood for since then.

We became members in November 2012 and got married at the church in September 2013. We have thoroughly enjoyed the high level of activity and the many programs and services that Country Club Christian Church offers. Many of the programs – a Lenten book study, marriage enrichment, and couple communication classes – have strengthened our faith and our relationship with each other. However, the point when I realized more than ever that Country Club Christian Church was the church where I belonged was when my family and I dealt with heartbreak. In June 2013, my younger brother, Nicholas, tragically passed away. Although a new member at that time, church officials and members coalesced around us and offered genuine support, thoughts and prayers in the days and weeks that followed. I was so touched by the level of kindness. At the first service that I attended after his death, the church was engaged in the sermon series titled Overwhelmed: Finding God in the Midst of Life's Storms. It seemed as if the sermon was divinely designed to assist me as I moved forward. The sermon that I heard on that day and all of the sermons in that series have provided me a guidebook as I assimilate to life without my brother and to rely on God and take solace in him.

Country Club Christian Church offers so much to its members, visitors, neighbors and community. It practices what it preaches and it perpetuates the highest ideals that are engrained in God's words and his many lessons. God has pointed us to Country Club Christian Church for many reasons, some have already presented themselves and many are yet to be discovered.
