Grace at Work Crews Span the City on Oct. 8

On Sat., Oct. 8, 90 members and friends of Country Club Christian Church participated in Grace At Work. Volunteers packed lunches and sorted food for Harvesters Community Food Network, worked on a garden at Jerusalem Farm, sorted clothes at Micah Ministries, and other projects.

Ben and Katie Carrier served as chairpersons for the effort. “What delighted us the most,” Ben said, “was the passion that our fellow church members showed for our organizational partners. As Katie and I traveled between locations on Saturday, we were shown the incredible things going on at each of our partners and how our volunteers played a part – not just for the day, but also on an ongoing basis. It was clear to us that our members have many special relationships and do meaningful work in our community.”

Collection Connection: Toothbrushes

Think about having one toothbrush, ever. For your whole life. Just one. Often this is the case for people in Nicaragua. For the last 11 years, our church has sent a mission team to Nicaragua to serve in areas of health care and community development. This month's Collection Connection supports our ongoing mission partnership. Donations of toothbrushes are needed, to be included in home health kits. Place donations in the basket in the parlor. Monetary donations are also needed to fund our medical clinic.

At Home with God

By Dr. R. Glen Miles

The Bible teaches that spiritual growth, change and new life are possible. However, this change is rarely quick or easy.

I am certain this desire for change comes from a deep yearning within to go home, to feel safe, to be known. The main character in Pat Conroy's novel, Beach Music says, "I could not quiet that pearly ache in my heart that I diagnosed as the cry of home."

We want a life that matters. We want to know God and be known by God. Finally, we want to know that we can be at home with God.

I remember one year at summer church camp there was a 16-year-old boy who was the camp clown. His name was Bobby. He made fun of everything and, to my great frustration, everyone. He could make the 100 kids in camp laugh their heads off and he could also viciously cut anyone down to size. He was loved and feared. He walked out of our evening campfire a couple of times. I asked him about walking out. "It's too corny at campfire; all that crying and stuff. Too preachy too."

At the closing campfire he got up in front of the group. We had talked that day about becoming the person God created us to be; to risk being a Christian, a person who loved God and loved neighbor, period. At campfire he said, with tears streaming down his face, "I've never been more at home than I am here. I am sorry for being mean. I was afraid at the beginning of the camp that no one would like me so I was just mean. But this week I've been challenged to grow up, to be kind. For the first time that I can remember, I feel like I've finally found a home."

What Bobby did was a risky thing. He took a chance to begin to change his behavior and to confess his desire to do so in front of his peers. Risk is a common element in the spiritual life.

John the Baptist, preparing the people for Jesus, preached, "Repent, for the kingdom of heaven has come near." That word repent has a ton of baggage attached to it but at its core it simply means turn around.

The beginning of spiritual growth and transformational change often starts with a simple choice to turn around, to begin again, to thus far and no further. Go ahead and give it a try. I have it on good authority: God allows U-turns.

Grace and peace to you,

Keep It Simple, Make It Meaningful

By Lisa McCleish, Director of Early Childhood Programs

The donation of a wardrobe moving box created a lot of excitement in the 2-year-old room. Yet with this ordinary box, the children have learned about teamwork and cooperation, size and dimension, physics and creating through imagination.

The first, and most difficult, task involved four 2-year-olds moving this “huge” box around two corners, down a hallway and through a door with only cheering and encouragement from their teacher; after some failed attempts, two children pulled, another got in the back and pushed, while the fourth simply couldn’t be bothered (there is always one in the group). Once in the classroom, that ordinary box became an artists’ canvas, a hideout, a garage and a tunnel. There were screams of excitement, giggles and some slight trepidation at going inside when the closed flaps made it dark. After a week, this box is still the center of excitement and imaginative play in that room.

We were fortunate this year to have several brand new families (new to Kansas City) tour and enroll in the preschool and preK program. Frequently the touring family will ask how we include faith in our curriculum; our answer is always the same, “We keep it simple and make it meaningful.”

For the smallest children, this includes songs and music, books to look at and read, a sense of comfort and belonging. As the children gain understanding, it becomes an awareness of others: sharing, taking turns, being helpful. There are simple prayers before snacks and lunch, stories and activities from the Bible, and a bigger awareness of how we can help other people (last summer the preschool camp invited police officers, firefighters and a few veterans to Country Club Christian Church and thanked them with banners, a song and child-made treats). There are field trips to the Zappia Sculpture and visits to the sanctuary to see the beauty of the stained glass windows or to “talk” to God. Questions are answered and asked by both children and adults, simply and in a way that makes sense.

Our hope, and goal, is for faith to be as simple as that cardboard box, yet so meaningful that it elicits questions and creates excitement. Through it all, we work together to help each other out.

Though the Mountains Will Crumble

By Monica Lewis, Minister to Children, Students and Families

On Oct. 15 at 7:00 p.m., in observance of the International Wave of Light, I lit a candle in my living room in front of a picture that references Isaiah 54. “Though the mountains will crumble, you will not.” When I lit the candle, I didn’t even think of its placement. It wasn’t until I bent down to take a picture to post on social media that I recognized the words behind the candle. That reference to Isaiah sits in that spot in my house every day.

When I lit that candle, I did it for so many people.

For friends and family. For friends of friends. For people I know only through blogs or other social media. For myself. For babies who so many of us have lost. For babies who remain only in memory. For sonogram pictures. For split cells that didn’t implant. For still births. For miscarriages. For infants who have died in their sleep. For all the babies and all the mothers who feel left without a label...mothers who feel like they don’t fit into any camp. Mother? Survivor? Victim? Fertility warrior?

In these moments, politics don’t matter. Religious understandings about the beginning of life don’t matter. What matters is on an individual level. What matters is the feelings and the experiences of each of the mothers, fathers and family members who’ve experienced loss. The woman with the enlarged picture of the cells splitting for her failed IVF attempt is grieving. The couple who was adopting a baby that was delivered still is grieving. Sometimes you know who they are—more often, you don’t. There are parents among us who no one realizes are parents. But they are.

It is a long road from one side of loss to the other. And it’s never fully resolved. Parents are never “healed” of their grief. In fact, it’s often their grief that allows them to feel connected to their child. But what those of us on the other side of grief know is that, even when we feel totally alone, God is always with us. God cries and mourns with us. And God continues to love and usher us through the worst moments in life.

Each year we recognize October as Pregnancy and Infant Loss Awareness month and Oct. 15 as Pregnancy and Infant Loss Remembrance Day. If you know of someone who has experienced their own loss please love on them this month. If their child was named, speak the name of him/her to his/her parents. Recognize that parental grief is real and fluid—it will come and go in waves for the rest of their lives. And when you connect with them remember that it may be God acting through you speaking the prophetic words that were spoken so long ago and are just as alive today, “Though the mountains will crumble, you will not.”

Monica
