A Christmas Festival – for All Ages

Sun., Dec. 11

This holiday tradition for all ages is designed so you can enjoy all or part of the festivities as your schedule allows. Bring your kiddos for cookies with Santa, come just for the program, or stick around to carol with your friends.

4:00 p.m. – The whole church is invited to enjoy chili and cookies with Santa. Have your photo taken for a complimentary keepsake ornament; cookie decorating and reindeer food.

5:00 p.m. – Christmas Story and Song, a program featuring seasonal music and readings in the sanctuary.

6:00 p.m. – Chili, Santa and ornaments continue. Bundle up and join us for old-fashioned caroling as we spread cheer in our church neighborhood on the trolley.

Santa’s Workshop Store for Children to Shop – The Well will be open during the festival so children can shop for gifts for their family. They are encouraged to bring a shopping list and some money to buy gifts.

Christmas Offering to Heart to Heart

By Lance Jessee

Each year at this time the Outreach Grants and Special Offering Team of Country Club Christian Church chooses a recipient for our Christmas offering. This season’s offering will be directed to a local charity, Heart to Heart International. Heart to Heart continues to provide relief and help for the victims of Hurricane Matthew, and these efforts are what led us to choose Heart to Heart as our offering recipient.

thew and the coast of Florida and the Carolinas is immense.

In Haiti, an estimated 200,000 homes were destroyed leaving 1.4 million people in need of humanitarian aid. In North Carolina an estimated 100,000 homes were damaged or destroyed. The damage to infrastructure and agricultural crops was estimated to be in the billions of dollars.

Disasters such as Hurricane Matthew, which hit in October 2016, make the news when they happen, but all too often our attention is drawn away from the suffering and need for help by other news such as the recent elections. The Heart to Heart prepared in advance of Hurricane Matthew by storing needed medical supplies and equipment in Port au Prince so that they could respond immediately to help the victims there. They dispatched mobile medical units to Florida and the Carolinas to help provide medical help there as well.

Our annual Christmas Offering is a way for our church to extend its reach and to carry out the Christian mission to help others in need. Heart to Heart is making a difference in the lives of many people, and they deserve our support.

Excitement and Sadness

By Dr. R. Glen Miles

I write with a mixture of excitement and sadness to tell you I have accepted an invitation from the Governing Board of the First Community Church of Columbus, Ohio, to become their next Senior Minister. This 5,000 member congregation is a strong and vital one much like Country Club Christian Church. They have three campuses, a media ministry, a staff of 75, and ministries that extend around the globe.

Julie and I have thoroughly enjoyed our 14 years here in Kansas City. You all have graciously welcomed us into your homes, encouraged us in ways too numerous to recount and continually been a source of joy and comfort. There will surely be tears of sadness in our eyes on the day we leave to take on this new adventure.

My final Sunday will be Feb. 5, 2017. There will be more information coming soon about that day. In the meantime, there is much to do and say. I am looking forward to celebrating the birth of our Lord and Savior with you on Christmas Eve. We will also celebrate together, in the weeks ahead, the many gifts Country Club Christian Church has to share with the world.

Change and transition can bring worry and wonder but you are well-suited for the future. You are led well by the Congregational Board and a dedicated staff. I could not be more proud of all that we have accomplished together and all that the Spirit of God is leading this church toward in the years ahead.

Grace and peace to you,

Advent for Children

By Lindsay Howes, Director of Children's Ministries

I don't know about you, but Advent in our house is a very exciting time. Let me be clear, there are lists upon lists, drawings upon drawings, gibberish upon gibberish on paper letting us know "exactly" what our children want for Christmas. It drives me crazy!

I love to see the joy in their faces when we talk about Christmas, but sometimes I feel defeated when it all falls back to wants, toys, STUFF. To give them (and myself) some credit, there are also moments of remembering Christ's birth, the excitement of trying to explain to a 4-year-old what Christmas is all about, and the weekly lighting of our Advent candle but unfortunately and honestly these moments are not as often as I would hope.

To see our children listening to the stories from the bible, processing in their minds the miracles and best of all, asking questions—that is when we really feel the excitement of Christmas.

My hope is for you all to take a moment, read the scripture, share the joy and and, most importantly, feel the true excitement of this Christmas season.

Merry Christmas!

Focus on What We Have

By Rev. Monica Lewis, Minister to Children, Students and Families

Until I met my husband I had never been shopping on Black Friday. My family still lives in a small town so when I was home for Thanksgiving there weren't really many opportunities to do so. My husband is also from a small town—his in eastern Kentucky.

The first time I went home with him for Thanksgiving I joined his stepmom in the madness of it. On Thanksgiving night we drove two hours, on winding roads, to the closest town with a Walmart Supercenter and then spent hours sitting on the floor of Walmart waiting on them to take down the ropes so we could buy $4 crockpots and things of that nature. I still remember how nauseous I was when 6:00 a.m. rolled around from not sleeping. It. Was. Miserable. But somehow, even after that misery, I've managed to think I need to shop on Black Friday each year since then; the only difference now is that I don't have to drive two hours to get to a store, I will not sit on a floor or wait in line, and I try with all my might to avoid Walmart and the reminder of the trauma of that first year.

This week I saw Glennon Doyle Melton's Instagram post about the gift guide that she publishes every year. All of the gifts suggested help to promote and do good in the world. Her family has a holiday rule that all of their shopping is done by the first week in December so that they can spend the month "in peace, together, making memories instead of trips to the mall." Doesn't that sound wonderful? I'm going to try that.

I'm giving myself this week to finish up my holiday gift buying. I'm going to embrace her family's practice in hopes of doing the smallest bit of justice to the feeling of expectation Advent brings. Like Glennon I want to "spend the holidays focused on what we HAVE instead of what we WANT. And that, my friends, is the key to joy."

I realize that I'm a product of my consumeristic culture. I know that I'm not going to stop buying presents at Christmastime—at least not yet. I love to give gifts and I support organizations that help out those who are less fortunate in hopes that they'll have a better Christmas. But what I CAN do is stop, take a breath, look around me, and take inventory of all the good that I already HAVE. Will you join me in doing the same?
