About the Author: Phillips is the author of five novels and was the winner of the 2009 Barnes & Noble Discover Award for The Well and the Mine. ## Easter Egg Hunt on April 9

On Mentors

By Dr. Mike Graves, Guest Preacher

Fred Craddock was my mentor, the pint-sized preacher who literally changed not just the way I preach, but the very landscape of preaching around the world. I note his lack of stature because he often did as well, and understandably so. He almost always needed a box of some sort to stand on behind pulpits. But what he lacked in height, he made up for in reach. In the late '60s, early '70s, preaching was in trouble because like so many conventions of society, authority was being questioned. Think Vietnam protests. Think Rowan and Martin's Laugh-In. How were preachers supposed to respond to times like that?

to respond to times like that?

Fred Craddock's answer was to turn preaching upside down. Rather than imagine people wanting to swallow sermons whole, no questions asked, Fred championed questions on their behalf. He once began a sermon with this line, "I hope you will not feel guilty if your heart was not all aflutter during the reading of the text. It's not very interesting." Needless to say, that's not what seminaries were teaching their young preachers to do. But it was honest, and that sort of honesty changed everything. Plus, it was a small way of preaching, not overpowering, much like Fred himself. (You can find an audio of the sermon on YouTube of course, titled "When the Roll Is Called Down Here.")

Back in 2001 I was blessed to help collect stories from his sermons, published under the title Craddock Stories. Now, I'm working on another book to honor Fred Craddock who passed away two years ago, the working title, What's Right with Preaching Today? A dozen or so scholars are writing essays in his honor, and lots of folks who loved to hear him preach are writing their own remembrances. A few folks from our church have taken up the task. If you'd be interested, let me know.

By the time you read this, I'll be on my way back from presenting at a conference being held this week in Fred's honor. Sewanee School of Theology, between Chattanooga and Nashville, will host pastors from around the country who want to hone their preaching skills, but mostly honor Fred Craddock. I count it one of the great blessings of my life that I learned so much about preaching from Fred, and that I can pass along what he taught me. Mostly, I count it a blessing that he was my friend.

Aging Conference to Improve Programming

Barbara Weary and Judy Schaefer participated in this week's Age Positive Conference to learn new ideas for creating age-friendly futures for all our neighbors. Presenters shared ways to both engage the gifts and creativity of the elderly and help us all adjust to the many changes that aging brings.

Barbara Weary and Judy Schaefer

Undergirding all the sessions was a commitment to advocate for the dignity of those who could no longer speak for themselves and to be intentional about including seniors from all economic and ethnic groups. The conference was sponsored by the Mid-America Regional

Virginia Reed Food Drive

Our next Virginia Reed Food Drive is Apr. 23. Our emphasis will be canned tuna and canned chicken. There are three ways to help feed our hungry neighbors:

- Bring a can to our donation points in the parlor and chapel any Sunday.
- Make a financial contribution to the Virginia Reed Food Drive on the Harvesters Community Food Network website (christianchurch.harvestersvfd.org). On Apr. 23, a computer will be available in the parlor to make an online donation.
- Make a financial contribution to the church and mark your check or giving envelope "food drive." You may place these gifts in the offering plate during worship.

For other ways to help us end hunger, contact Joe Walker at joew@cccckc.org.

Your gifts support the five area food pantries that our church supports: Community Christian Church, La Gloria de Dios Christian Church, First Christian Church, Della Lamb Community Services and Cross-Lines Community Outreach.

With Gratitude

By Anne Haraughty, Ministries Coordinator

I hope you were able to participate in many or all of the special services and events surrounding Easter Sunday.

It takes a tremendous number of volunteers to make all the events of the church happen, and they are all appreciated!

Today, I would like to express my gratitude to the team who volunteered to decorate, cook, serve and clean-up for Easter Sunday brunch.

Hundreds of people enjoyed a bite to eat or a full breakfast thanks to this crew. Please join me in thanking the “Easter Brunch bunch”:

Collection Connection: Flashlights and Batteries

In May, we are collecting flashlights and batteries for Micah Ministry. Many of our Micah guests have had their utilities turned off or are homeless. These folk depend on candles, which can be dangerous, and flashlights to help them light their darkness. If you'd like to help our brothers and sisters at Micah, please bring batteries and/or flashlights with batteries for our May Collection Connection.

Amani Choir

Our congregation, in partnership with Della Lamb Community Services, is forming a choir of refugees and church members called Amani, the Swahili word for peace. Please email Barbara George at barbarag@cccckc.org if you wish to join. Space is limited. Meets Tuesdays at 7:00 p.m. at Della Lamb. ## Working Yourself Out of a Job

By Rev. Monica Lewis, Minister to Children, Students and Families

Next week I'll be at Princeton Seminary for the Princeton Forum. I've been invited there to be a coach for some of the pastors in a certificate program of their Institute for Youth Ministry. Just today I spent some time on the phone with one of those pastors.

Anyone who's ever mentored or coached someone knows that the relationship is always reciprocal. Often the mentor gets more out of the deal than the person on the other end—just ask any of our Faith

Mentors who have ever participated in our Pastors' Class. (SHAMELESS PLUG ALERT: Don't forget the Pastors' Class Reunion Breakfast coming up Apr. 30 from 9:45-10:55 a.m. in the Youth Center!) Our faith itself calls us to always be both a student and a mentor. Even Jesus continued to learn from the people he was teaching all through his ministry.

I'll spend the next year in monthly check-ins with two of the pastors who I'm mentoring, walking with them as they navigate the final piece of their certificate program—a large scale project in their ministry. When I was on the phone with one of my mentees, she said to me, "I kind of feel like if this project works I will have worked myself out of a job."

If you've been around me much you know that this is a phrase I say all the time. One of my most influential mentors in ministry told me that that should always be our goal as pastors—to work ourselves out of a job. Perhaps that doesn't make the most fiscal sense when we look at it on the surface but it sure does make sense if you're entrepreneurial. And in a constant and rapidly changing culture, the church has to be just that. We must constantly try new ideas. Always willing to fail. And resolved enough in our faith to know that God will continue to be with us as we look for the place God leads us.

If we are being the church that Jesus modeled, we know that we create something (like Jesus), we give it legs by equipping the people to go create more "somethings" (like the disciples), and even when we become far removed from the minutiae of it all, we trust that when we have done the work to make it sustainable, the Holy Spirit will take it from there.

I wonder what that looks like for you... working yourself out of a job. What does it look like for our church? If, like my mentee, we each spent a year on a project or an idea that was directly related to our service in the church. And we gave it legs. And we made it sustainable. And we gave all we had to it. And we trusted the Holy Spirit to take it from there as it becomes something bigger than we ever imagined. Wow. May we all have the audacity to try!
